WHAT'S ON

CROWSNEST PASS HERITAGE INVENTORY PROJECT JULY 22ND.

On Monday, July 22, the Municipality of Crowsnest Pass and the Municipal Historic Resources Board will be holding its Second Open House for the Heritage Inventory Project from 2 to 8 PM at the Coleman Senior's Drop – In Centre located at 7805 – 18th Avenue in historic downtown Coleman.

Property owners and members of the general public are invited to review progress made on the Municipality of Crowsnest Pass Phase 1 Heritage Inventory Project (Coleman Region) which is concentrating on evaluating historic and heritage commercial, institutional, and residential properties in Coleman and the western region. Additional phases in the upcoming couple of years will focus on Blairmore, Bellevue, Frank and Hillcrest.

Coleman's Context Paper, the heritage surveys and draft Statements of Significance will be available. Members of the Municipal Heritage Board, and the consultants from CDS Inc. who prepared the surveys and SoSs, will be present to answer any questions regarding the Project, the municipal designation process, or other elements about conserving and preserving heritage properties. In addition, your input in reviewing the material is very important to ensure accuracy of content, so please plan to attend.

For further details please contact Glen Snelgrove, Secretary, Crowsnest Pass Municipal Historic Resources Board at (403) 394-6040 glen@muniserve.ca , or Merinda Conley of Community Design Strategies Inc. at (403) 277-1117 cds.inc@telus.net .

PROJECT PROGRESS

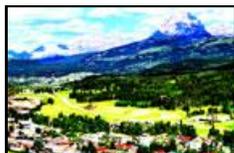

In April 2013, the Municipality of Crowsnest Pass launched its Phase 1 (Coleman Region) Heritage Inventory Project.

Public input at the first Open House held on April 10th assisted members of the Municipal Historic Resources Board and our heritage consultants from Community Design Strategies Inc. (CDS Inc.) to identify 40 properties that appear to have potential heritage/historic significance and have been compiled into a Places of Interest List (POIL).

The Coleman Context Paper and heritage surveys for several of these properties have been completed. Draft Statements of Significance (SoS) that describe their historical significance of these properties have been prepared.

It all started in 1869, when American fur traders brought a wagon train of whiskey and other trade goods north. They established a stockade, later known as Fort Whoop Up, and made a ton of profit before the Mounties showed up to rein in the whiskey business. Today, the fort still trades with the aboriginal Blackfoot tribes of Southern Alberta, supplying many ceremonial goods, hides, sweetgrass, and other items.

A Hundred Million, Billion, Trillion Barrels of Water

By
Ian McKenzie

Damage from the recent floods throughout Alberta makes us remember the Pass floods from years gone by. The first flood to affect a populated area occurred in 1902, but as most Pass towns had yet to be established only Blairmore and Frank could have been affected. According to a June 4, 1908 edition of the Frank Paper, "the year 1902 [was] when the worst rains in the history of the district were experienced". The event was probably covered in contemporary issues of the Frank Sentinel, but unfortunately almost no copies of that newspaper survive.

The next big flood event was in 1908 and primarily involved Gold Creek. By this time Frank covered the same area as the present community and industrial park do now. According to the June 4, 1908 edition of the Frank Paper,

Something like a hundred million, billion, trillion, and then some, barrels of water fell from the skies... the rains started Friday night and a continuous downpour followed in which there was not a break of more than a few minutes up to Tuesday morning... a most phenomenal rise set in around noon and early in the afternoon Gold Creek was out of its banks up the gulch and was rapidly flooding the residences along the west bank.

Coleman and Blairmore on the Old Man were not affected by the flood to any great extent, but Lille, on Gold Creek felt the effects... the worst damage was at No 1 camp where the West Canadian company had quite a stretch of railroad washed out and four bridges badly damaged... at Bellevue the railroad yards of the West Canadian company were covered with a foot of water... At Hillcrest, Drumm Creek was aflood, causing considerable annoyance...

In the great flood of 1923, a nine-year-old boy was swept away and drowned. The June 7, 1923 edition of the Blairmore Enterprise states

All through the Crow's Nest Pass, from Fernie to Pincher, great damage was wrought. Besides the washing away of railway tracks and bridges, houses have been bereft of their foundations, gardens swept of their roots, and damage beyond estimation done to contents of basements. The greatest damage was done in West Coleman and Central Blairmore, where some buildings were completely swept from their foundations and twisted beyond repair. The new cement bridge built last year in East Coleman met a fate similar to that of the Lyon Creek Victoria [main street] bridge at Blairmore and the structure lies a complete ruin partially embedded in loose rocks and logs. The [railway] spur bridge at Hillcrest lost several piers. The spur bridges at Blairmore were considerably damaged through dynamite used to free the structures from logs and stumps. The main auto road both east and west of Blairmore was undermined in sections so as to be almost impassable.

Afterwards, the mayor of Blairmore wrote to the province for financial assistance, saying

Lyon Creek... has broken its bounds, banks and cribbing in sections have been entirely washed away, and as a result the stream is changing its course and making new channels and in the event of any new freshets, the water will be beyond control. The Crow's Nest River is also in the same serious and menacing condition... there has been very serious losses incurred, caused by flood water, damage and destruction to public highways, streets, industrial and private properties...

Particularly hard hit was Bellevue's riverside shantytown of Il Bosc, but that merited no mention in the local papers.

Another great flood occurred in 1942, reported in the Blairmore Enterprise on May 15:

People of Pass towns are emerging from the worst flood in its history. A deluge of rains that continued from Saturday to Wednesday brought stream s up to overflow their banks. Lyon Creek was the main threat to Blairmore, its mad torrents covering most of the eastern and southern sections of the town. Main street bridge failed to withstand the pressure and collapsed Tuesday. Shortly afterwards the State Street [present 21 Avenue] bridge over Lyon Creek became impassable as the waters made in-roads around the east approach. Just before the main street bridge collapsed, the town service truck smashed through the undermined street near it, landing nose up, where it still stands. About one hundred families were driven from their homes in East Blairmore. Some were given shelter by friends on higher levels, while others were housed at the Cosmopolitan hotel, Union hall and other places. Many homes and other buildings were moved off their foundations and all suffered furniture damages. Garages were swept away with cars in them, but did not move far. Telephone, light and telegraph poles were carried away.

At Coleman a similar condition prevailed, with some houses moved from their foundations. Nez Perzie [sic], Star and McGillivray creeks were in flood. Hillcrest also suffered when the Hillcrest creek went on the rampage, threatening the entire town. At Frank Gold creek came down with great fury, threatening the traffic bridge near the depot, as well as the CPR tracks, water tank and station. The highway between Blairmore and Frank became seriously inundated and at one point near the McVey bridge was almost impassable. At Frank and Coleman boats were used to rescue some families from their homes that were surrounded by water to a depth from four to ten feet.

There were other smaller flood events that primarily affected low-lying neighborhoods such as Coleman's Bushtown, but the next big event was the flood of 1995. Bridges, roads and railways were washed out, and the local hospital was evacuated as a precaution.

Museum of the Highwood

The Museum of the Highwood collection sustained extensive damage during the recent flood in High River. However, the main floor of the museum and the photographic collection, research files, archival materials and exhibits sustained minimal damage. The basement was flooded, so the mechanical systems will have to be replaced and the building cleaned. At this time museum personnel are removing the collection from its damaged off-site storage facility. Artifacts and archival materials that can be restored are being cleaned and packed for treatment.

Ironically, one of the first artifacts that was recovered from the sludge and muck was Calgary Stampede founder Guy Weadick's hat. This was found on the first day of the 2013 Calgary Stampede!

Police arrested Dr. Ladova at the beach at Jackson Park on Lake Michigan and charged her with obscenity. The "skin-tight" bathing suit had long been accepted in Britain for both men and women. After Dr. Ladova's daring experiment, almost eight years would pass before the taboo was discarded in the United States.
